A Reservation on the Muddy.

thorities the impolicy of establishing an Indian reservation on the Muddy, in the southeast portion of Lincoln county.

The proposition of the Indian Department is to appropriate the fertile and in the southeast portion of the Indian Department is to appropriate the fertile and in the south of beautiful valley of the Muddy to a reservation for the Indians. To this the setthere in the valley enter a solemn protest.

They went there when it was an isolated spot, scarcely trodden by the foot of a white man, and built up homes; they have coped successfully with the aborigines and brought them to see the benefits of civilization. At present comparative benefits and trust abuses his authority, he should be dealt with summarity. We tree, nes and brought them to see the beneats and trust abuses his authority, in the dealt with summarily. We mengraphen & Utah = 94 94 50 9 87 87 80 peace exists between the white settlers and the aborigines. The latter are also their sworn duty, and we will always and the aborigines. opposed to the establishment of a reservation upon which to place the untutored savages who roam at liberty over the plains around the Muddy. The Muddy Not refrain from denouncing the act. We hoove the trave and dauntless offer who will be trave and dauntless of his average two miles wide, making 50 square miles, or 200 quarter sections of land, ample to support in comfort, if not affluence, 500 families, leaving over 60 acres of land to each family for cultivation and for grazing. We all know that it is hufor grazing. We all know that it is nu-mane in the Government to provide for the "noble red man," and in answer to the Dean inquiry which may arise at the Department, "What shall we do with these Indians?" we reply that they may be sent on the reservation now established at La Paz, in Arizona, on the east side of the Colorado, and adjacent to which the Chemehueve Indians (a branch of the Pintes, who speak the same dialect and Pintes, who speak the same dialect and often intermarry) are located. To this reservation such of the Muddy Indians (also of the Pinte tribe) as desire tog ought to be sent, while those inclined to civilization should be allowed to remain. For the protection of the white settlers and friendly Indians, a military post ought to be established on the Muddy, or at Ivanpals, so as to be accessible in case of trouble. The Muddy Valley possesses one of the finest bodies of farming land on the American continent, and we are one of the finest bodies of farming land on the American continent, and we are sure that the Department, if properly informed, would not drive off white settlers to make a reservation for savages. The country in and around the Muddy contains a vast area of grazing land and minimal deposits which, under the fostering care of the General Government, would be developed and made to contribute its quota to the entire country. A remonstrance from the leading men of Pioche should be sent to our delegation in Congress and to the head of the Indian Department against the establishment of an object of the unfortunate Populay.
